Who can receive a C.V. Starr International Experiential Learning Fellowship?

Any undergraduate or graduate Baruch student who has secured a work abroad experience of at least 6 weeks in a country not currently under a U.S. Department of State Travel Warning of level 3 or 4, and who is planning to come back to Baruch after the experience is over may apply for a fellowship.

What do you mean by “secured” a work abroad experience?

You have “secured” a position when a company or institution has made you a formal offer of a position, accompanied by a formal job description, and you have formally accepted the offer. Verbal offers or offers which are vague about your job duties are not secured, and you should clarify the offer and the duties in writing.

What kind of work abroad can I do?

Any internship, volunteer or community service position, English teaching position, or conventional work, paid or unpaid, that offers career development experience is appropriate for the fellowship, as long as the other eligibility requirements are met.

What does the application involve? What is the timeline?

The application will include information about your position and how it is relevant to your major or your intended career, a proposed budget, a CUNY International Travel Waiver and Release Packet, and supporting documents. Applications must be completed and submitted no less than ten days before you depart the U.S., and are paid out after you return. Certain students may receive a portion of the fellowship prior to travel.

How much is the fellowship worth?

The amount of the fellowship varies based on the relevance of the job description to your major or intended career, your proposed budget and cost of living in the host country, the duration of your experience, whether any additional professional development opportunities are included in your program, and whether you have received the fellowship in the past. It also depends on the number of eligible students who apply in a given fiscal year. Fellowships generally do not cover the entire cost of participating in the program, but may cover a significant portion of your costs.

Can I receive the fellowship again if I have already received it in the past?

Yes! You may receive a slightly lower amount the second (or third) time around, but you may receive it more than once.
