Student winner of the Abraham J. Brillhoff Prizes in Ethics

"Through Bloodshed, Conflict, and Disaster: The People Seek Humanity". The student prize goes to Hope Andros, a freshman planning to major in political science. The Brillhoff Committee wrote: "It is a cliché that violence breeds violence and brutality breeds brutality. The paper argues that this isn't necessarily so: that violence and brutality can generate empathy and many other humane responses. The process of humanization is illustrated with examples from videogames, novels, and rock music."
